

PREFACE.

In issuing this last volume of the Āṅguttara-Nikāya I have to say a few words on the work now laid before the public in a complete edition¹.

It was in spring 1896 that I began transcribing and collating those parts of the Āṅguttara which were left unfinished by the lamented Dr. Richard Morris, and in autumn 1898 I had finished my transcript and collation of the eleventh Nipāta. For the whole work, from Part III—V, I have had the same five MSS. which have been spoken of by me in the Preface to Part III, sub 1—5. These MSS. are identical with those which Dr. Morris made use of in Parts I and II of his edition, respectively. Moreover, I have gone fully into the Siamese edition, and, for some parts of the sixth Nipāta, and for the whole of the seventh and eighth Nipātas I had at my disposal another MS., mentioned sub 6 in the Preface noticed before. I am sorry I was not able to mention two further MSS., likewise consulted by my hon. predecessor, but only for Part I, because these MSS. belong to the Collection of Pāli MSS. in the British Museum, and it was impossible for me to make a longer stay in London to collate them.

If we are to judge from our MSS., we may fairly assume three different versions of the Āṅguttara, a Sinhalese, a Burmese, and a Siamese, the last being represented only by the edition of the present King of Siam, this last, however, representing in itself a whole set of MSS. Of these three versions the Siamese seems to hold an intermediate position between the two former, since it agrees with the Sinhalese MSS. in about as many instances as with the Burmese¹. It presents also some readings peculiar to itself. The Sinhalese group of MSS. as well as the Burmese differ, at all events, more widely from each other than from the Siamese, as will be seen from the various readings given in the foot-notes. The former group, comprising three MSS., viz. the Turnour MS. and two Morris MSS. have all essential readings in common, besides a great number of such as are of more or less accidental character. The same holds true of the group represented by the well-written Mandalay MS., by the Phayre MS. and another MS. of the Morris Collection.

Into both versions corruptions have crept, a large number of which are clerical errors, slips of the pen and similar mistakes, owing to the circumstance that the copyists have seen wrong or heard wrong. Again, words or sentences that were perplexing have given rise to many errors in sense and meaning. Sometimes, a remedy against such perplexities was employed (at least in the Burmese MSS.) by borrowing an expression from the commentary, where it had been substituted for an obscure one occurring in the text. In a good many cases these corruptions are to be amended and eliminated, either by aid of the MSS. themselves (unless the corruptions are common to them), or by the same words from other passages, or, finally, by the commentary, which is often apt to throw light upon textual difficulties. But there are other cases, where we are at a loss, partly because neither the MSS. nor the commentary give us any help, partly because we have to decide between two or more readings of which no one is absolutely wrong. Thus the present edition will be liable, I am sure, to many mistakes, but since I have given, as it were, a complete apparatus criticus, everyone who uses it will have the necessary means of finding out for himself which reading should be adopted.

In characterizing above our MSS. as different versions, I must make one great reservation. The two or three versions differ, no doubt, even in essential readings. Nevertheless I am of opinion that they point to one and the same source, from which all have sprung. There exists no fundamental discrepancy between them, as regards the subject-matter, and they may be said to agree also in the form, unless we ask more than we should demand. It is true, that those MSS. which are called Sinhalese stand in closer connexion to each other than to the Burmese, and *vice versâ*¹, still we always meet with the very same tradition and find reasons enough to refer the different versions to one single archetype. It may be open to dispute, whether our Sinhalese MSS. of the Aṅguttara are the more reliable, or our Burmese. The late Dr. Morris seemed inclined to give the preference to the former, and he was undoubtedly right in rejecting the Burmese readings when the Sinhalese were decidedly better, but, as a rule, there is no MS. nor any set of MSS. which can be relied upon indiscriminately. Dr. Morris himself seems to have felt this, for in the new edition of the first two Nipātas he has given his sanction to a Burmese reading which he had condemned as nonsense, in the Preliminary Remarks to the earlier edition². I do not like generalizations. As a matter of fact, there are numerous passages where the Burmese MSS. have preserved the correct reading, while there are perhaps yet more numerous passages where we may safely follow the Sinhalese MSS. I think it best to pay due attention to both and am not willing to neglect the indications given to us by the commentary.

² The reading in question, i. e. dummaṅku is, of course, at first sight rather perplexing. Its meaning, however, is not simply 'immoral' and the like, but 'staggering' in a moral sense and with a certain connotation, the latter

In order to render this edition of the Āṅguttara more accessible to all those who intend consulting it for purposes of literary research, specially for that of comparison of the Āṅguttara with other canonical books of both great schools of Buddhism, I have added, in an Appendix, an analytical table extending over the whole work. Now we learn from a *versus memorialis*¹, that there are 9557 Suttas in the Āṅguttara, and, although there are, in fact, at most about 2344 Suttas in the Āṅguttara, as was known being clearly expressed by dur- in 'dummaṅku'. This prefix gives to the word 'maṅku', the original meaning of which is given by Böhtlingk as equivalent to 'staggering', 'weak on feet' (schwankend, schwach auf den Füßen), a sense modified by special disapprobation.—Dummaṅku signifies one who is staggering in a disagreeable, censurable and scandalous manner, because he is not ashamed at his behaviour, or the like. Other examples of a similar connotation in words beginning with dur- are 'durabhi-mānin', 'duravalepa', 'durāgraha'. Buddhaghosa, too, seems to be in favour of this explanation of the word. The first time when dummaṅku occurs, Dukanipāṭa XVII, 1 (Part I, p. 98), he only says:—dummaṅkūnan ti dussilānaṃ, but the second time, Dasakanipāṭa XXXI, 3 (Part V, p. 70), he is a little more copious. His explanation runs as follows:—dummaṅkūnaṃ puggalānaṃ niggahāyā ti dummaṅkū nāma dussilapuggalā, ye maṅkubhāvaṃ āpādamānā pi dukkheṇa āpajjanti vitikkamaṃ karontā vā katvā vā na lajjanti, tesam niggahatthāya, and so on. The words in italics seem to confirm our opinion. We find, besides, in the Āṅguttara (Part IV, p. 97sq.) the word dummaṅkuya (n.), for which Buddhaghosa substitutes dummaṅkubhāva.

to Buddhaghosa in the fifth century A.D., I venture to hope the reader will make allowance for any mistake on my part.

A second Appendix presents a list, where Suttas (or the greater part of any Sutta) occurring twice or more in the Āṅguttara are noted. In this list, however, I have not included those numerous Suttas which deal with the same subject, once concisely and once more in detail. I have brought them together in a separate list which, I hope, will prove to be complete.

There is, moreover, another feature of our work, equally obvious with that already mentioned. The various matters are arranged according to a purely numerical system of grouping. In consequence of this principle of number, subjects grouped under one of the higher numerals, as for instance in the navāṅgas, are not unfrequently arranged in the way of addition (for the navāṅgas the scheme mostly being five plus four), but, with a few exceptions, the component parts are by no means mere repetitions e. g. of the pañcāṅgas or the caturāṅgas in the fifth and fourth Nipātas. Since this peculiarity is inherent in a great many Suttas, a brief statement would, in my opinion, afford some service to our knowledge of the work done by the makers and compilers of the Āṅguttara, and therefore I did not omit it¹.

I should be very glad, if I could also add a list of

¹ In the Aṭṭhakanipāta LXII and LXXVIII (Part IV, p. 296 sqq.; p. 328 sqq.) the subjects are registered exceptionally under five heads from six down to two, and in the Dasakanipāta XXVII and XXVIII (Part V, p. 48 sqq.) they are registered under ten heads from one up to ten. The nearer we draw to the end of the work, the more the creative power—sit venia verbo—shrinks, and in the last Nipāta hardly anything original is to be found. How the five first chapters of this book are made up, may be gathered from the commentary which describes them as follows:—Ekādasanipātassa paṭhamāḍini heṭṭhā vuttanayen' eva kevalañ c'ettha ādito pañcasu nibbidāvirāgaṃ dvidhā bhinditvā ekādasāṅgāni katāni.

those Suttas of the Anguttara which are identical, or nearly identical, with those in other canonical books. A Synoptical Table like this would, no doubt, prove to be very useful, but such a task, I regret to say, far exceeds my forces, at least at present. Besides, nobody would be likely to look for it here. I shall only adduce, in a footnote, a few parallel passages to other works and some quotations in, and from our work¹. If, however, I make

(3) Quotations in the Aṅguttara: —

S.N. v. 1048 is quoted in A. I, 133 by the name of Punnapañha, v. 1106—7 in I, 134 by that of Udayapañha, and v. 1042 in III, 399; 401 by that of Metteyyapañha, their common head being called Pārāyana.

From S. I, 48 the verses are quoted in A. IV, 449 and introduced by the words:—vuttam idaṃ āvuso Pañcāla-candena devaputtena. This chapter of the Aṅg. (IX, XLII) expounds the moral meaning of the first Pāda. Furthermore, a stanza which is pronounced by Taṇhā (Cupido), one of Māra's daughters, as we learn from the Mārasaṃyutta (3, 5) in S. I, 126, is quoted in A. V, 46; 47 sq. under the name of Kumāripāñhā, but attributed there to the Buddha himself. I cannot identify a quotation made from the Mahāpañhā (pl.) in A. V, 54; 58. In the commentary we only read Mahāpañhesū ti mahanta-atthapariggāhakesu pañhesu. There exists, moreover, a number of sayings, attributed to the Buddha e. g. in A. III, 98 sq., the source of which is unknown to me, but since a Dukkha-kkhandha-Sutta-Pariyāya is mentioned in Jāt. II, 314, and a sentence quoted therefrom is nearly identical with one of them, it may be hoped that it will be traced ere long.

(4) Quotations from the Aṅguttara: —

No explicit quotation in any other canonical book is known to me. In the non-canonical Milinda-Pañha the Aṅguttara is referred to several times, but not by name (see for details Professor T. W. Rhys Davids' list in the Introd. to vol. XXXV of the S.B.E. p. XXVII sq.). Twice, however, viz. p. 362 and 392 (of Trenckner's edition), the Aṅguttara is referred to by name or, strictly speaking, by the name of Ekuttara (Ekuttaranikāyavaralañcake, and 'nikāyavare), i. e. the work which is based on the principle of adding 'one' in each subsequent Nipāta. The passages referred to are I, XIII, 7 (A. I, 23) and X, XLVIII § 2 (V, 88), not X, v, 8, as Mr. Trenckner had pointed out (Notes, p. 430).—Among those passages which, in the Milinda, are introduced by some or other formula, e. g. bhāsitaṃ Bhagavatā, and marked as 'not traced' by Professor Rhys Davids in the list given by him on p. XXXI sq. of the Introd. above named, there is inter alia (Mil. p. 164) a quotation from the Aggikkhandhūpama-Sutta (A. IV, 135).

simply is, because I believe that all works of this genre deserve a special examination on account of their being entirely dependent upon the Āṅguttara (see Dr. Morris' and Professor Edward Müller's Introductions, respectively). I have also omitted often recurring stock-phrases, similes and the like which, of course, would not be sought for in vain in a Concordance to the Tipiṭaka. Such a Concordance is still a great desideratum of Pāli scholarship.

I have to mention (see Preface to Part IV) a slight difference in counting the Suttas between the commentary and the present edition. In the Dasaka-Nipāta the commentary divides our No. XXXI into two parts, from § 4 down to the end. Our No. XXXII corresponds with No. XXXIII of the commentary, and our No. XXXIII with its No. XXXIV. Then it counts our No. XXXIV besides as XXXIV and our No. XXXVIII as XXXIX, but our No. XL again corresponds with its No. XL. The divisions of the commentary are apparently wrong. In the Ekādasaka-Nipāta the commentary unites our Nos. VII and VIII, and thus it counts ten Suttas in the first Vagga, not eleven.

The Index of words which I have given for this part of the Āṅguttara, as for the two former parts, does not pretend to be complete. I have only endeavoured not to omit any word, or any particular use of words, which may be either missing in Childers or given there without sufficient references.

No quotation from the A. is given by Professor Fausböll in his List of Quotations (see Index to the Jātaka, p. 237 sqq.), although Jāt. I, 148 refers to A. I, 24 (Etadagam), Jāt. I, 228 to A. IV, 392 sqq. (Velāmakasutta), Jāt. II, 262 silently to A. IV, 187 sq. (= Vin. I, 237), and in Jāt. II, 347 sqq. the Paccuppanna-Vatthu is borrowed from A. IV, 91 sqq. For quotations from the A. and other works to be found in the Nettipakaraṇa, I may be permitted to refer to my edition of this book in preparation.

In conclusion, I wish to address a special acknowledgment to the Councils of the India Office and the Royal Asiatic Society for their liberality in consenting to, and prolonging the loan of the MSS. needed for this edition.
